A Character's Story

What are Cosmonots?

Cosmonots are stars come to life. Horoscopes, constellations, planets, and stars; Whatever heavenly body can be seen can be a Cosmonot. Cosmonots borrows from cultures, mythology, and stories from everywhere. We want every story to be told in a captivating way to bring interest to these characters. We may not tell you your horoscope for the day, but we can give you an interesting story where the horoscope figures came from. We want to bring meaning to the designs and characters. We hope that bringing out the story for each figure adds a special appeal to our fans.

A Cosmonot may not be what you expect. Larger than life stars and heavenly bodies can be wrapped up in hundreds of years of stories. Constellations were born from our ability to see figures and shapes where there are none. We want Cosmonots to convey that raw creativity and build upon traditions to create a universe of characters. We want our characters to appeal to kids and experienced collectors alike, and expressing that variety is the best way to accomplish that.

The Blind Box

Mystery boxes, aka blind boxes, are one of the biggest trends in toys today. When someone takes a chance and purchases a blind box, the customer feels satisfaction in finding a rare figure or the one they have been chasing. This adds to the value and collectability of any figure or toy. We offer two choices for Cosmonots fans: either purchase the figures from our online store, or purchase them in retail as blind boxes. There's a twist: There are secret figures that can only be obtained through blind boxes. Collectors really hoping to fill out their collection will still have the thrill of the hunt, with the option to buy a figure online.

"Chasers" or secret figures, draw collectors to sets so they can have them all. A chaser can be a toy painted in a different color. Maybe Ursa Major or Draco are gold in stead of their normal colors. New figures can also appear this way, so there is always a surprise to be had. We hope this adds to the excitement of collecting Cosmonots.

Art Toys for the Bold

Cosmonots are art toys, not your standard plastic figure. You won't find them in a museum though. Art toys go a step beyond what comes out of a vending machine. Each toy has unique features, color and design. The articulation and quality of craftsmanship adds to the collectability of these figures. We hold our products to a high standard befitting collectors. It also makes these figures a great gift. Figures that vary in design and color broaden the appeal of Cosmonots, and we hope that this quality sets them apart from other figures.

We hope to start incorporating artist signature series to our figures. Popular and well-known designers will craft character concepts and bring their individual style to Cosmonots. This adds more dimension to our characters and emphasizes that these art pieces, and collectables.

Exploring Design with Reis O Brien

Reis O Brien is lead designer at Funko Pop figures. His concepts and art are the backbone of the success of the Funko brand. When asked what his favorite line of toys to work on at Funko is, O Brien responded: "Mystery Minis. Hands down... I love working on them! For me, they offer the most room for experimentation in design. You can break out of the mold a bit, stretch your creative muscles. Don't get me wrong, I love the challenge of working within the parameters of Pop design, but Mystery Minis have become the toy line that I get most excited about. But, man, they're a lot of work."

Even when it comes to design, toy makers enjoy variability and new ideas. O Brien added, "I need to be reminded that there are people out there just wanting to love these toys, and it's my job to give them something worthy of loving".

Sean Wilkinson Talks Toys

Sean Wilkinson is Creative Director at Funko, and describes his job as being the creative powerhouse. "I head up creative and facilitate creative development among our talented team of artists. From start to finish this includes preplanning, making sure everything comes out like it is supposed to." Creating and living in the toy scene has been a passion for Sean for a long time. He added, "I pinch myself a lot when I think about it – certainly it's a 'I can't believe it' moment. If you told me at 10 years old that I would have been doing this, I would have said 'get lost.'" Sean considers a large part of his job to take existing ideas and present them with a new twist or design. "It's fun being for our designers to create collectibles that are old school and working with new formats."

Our Products

Cosmonots products come in a variety of sizes, shapes and colors. Including our secret figures available only in the blind boxes, there are plenty of Cosmonots to discover. Below are some of our introductory characters from Collection 1.

Our products are made from high quality materials with an emphasis on paint that really pops, and never fades. The silhouettes of each figure are meant to be eye-catching and separate our toys from the rest. Articulation is also a factor, since we don't want our figures to just be paperweights. Kids and collectors alike will enjoy having our products.

A Character's Story

Cosmonots like Draco are influenced by real mythology and stories. These characters are ready for adaptation into media like comic books and animation thanks to the world-building and designs we have for each character.

Draco is one of the largest constellations in the sky. A tree of golden apples on Mount Olympus was said to have the most delicious fruit in the world, and Hercules, son of Zeus, sought to get the fruit. Hercules fought the Titans along Mount Olympus, and finally reached Draco. After a long fight and obtaining the golden apples, the demigod Hercules was guilt-ridden about defeating Draco. He threw the Titan dragon into the sky, to live amongst the stars. Now Draco guards the sky and watches from above.

Draco doesn't seem to mind; his calm demeanor is ideal for a guiding star, less so for a guard dog.
